LINER NOTES

Written by Pietro Beltrani

We often find ourselves escaping in our thoughts, dreaming of what isn't right in front of us. In everyone's heart, there's a perennial dissatisfaction with reality, and hence the desire to change it. As I grow older, I'm realizing that what I want isn't to escape reality, but to find a place, a home to return to, strong roots.

Of course, the concept of home isn't just about a physical place, but also a set of factors that bring us back to it: our family, loved ones, but also our own spaces where we can rediscover ourselves.

My new album, "Home", aims to evoke this desire through pieces that represent ideal places and concepts, but also true snapshots of real life.

"Love in Winter" evokes the feeling of love experienced in the cold season, which is different from the feeling of "Love in Spring": the first seeks protection, support, security, while the second is more about infatuation, warmth, and hope.

"Dear Friend" is a letter in which we wistfully reminisce about happy and less happy moments shared with an old friend.

"Distance" symbolizes the fragility of our souls, how even a small distance in ideas or actions can undermine a relationship, even a lasting one.

We often find ourselves in places far from home: the wind lapping the sea ("Ocean") and “Breathe”) or the tranquil landscapes of the Dolomites bring us back to a dimension of reflection and peace. In these places we can meditate on what we have built and what still remains to be done (“Past and Present”, “Vision”). But the call of home is stronger than ever: today more than ever we need a place to return to, a place where we can feel connected and safe. May we all find our own spiritual Home.
